VALUABLE
Timber Lands
And Mill Property
FOR SALE.
THE subscriber, desirous of disposing of all his interest in Timber Lands and mills, will sell on favorable terms the following:
One-Half Township No. 5, Range 4, Oxford County.
The whole township contains twenty-six thousand (26,000) acres, is heavily timbered with spruce, estimated at sixty to eighty millions, all of which stands within near and easy hauling distance of the M[illegible] away river or its branches, which runs through the town, or Parmachene Lake, which is embraced within its limits.
Also 16,000 Acres of Land in the Town of Errol, Oxford Co.,
well covered with large Spruce timber. Swift river and its branches run through these lands and empty into the Androscoggin below Rumford Falls.
Also 1100 Acres Timber and Wood Land in Town of Gorham, N. H.
two miles above the Alpine House, on the line of the Grand Trunk Railroad, and the banks of the Androscoggin river. There is a large quantity of wood on these lots which from its proximity to the Railroad, is steadily increasing in value.
Also 2500 Acres Lands in the Towns of Albany and Stoneham.
near the village of North Waterford, Oxford County. This land is covered with thrifty sapling Pine timber, standing near Crooked river, which runs through the tract. Logs put into Crooked river can be run to Saccarappa, or by hauling four to five miles they can be put into the Saco. There is a good mill privilege, with a single saw mill on the tract; distance to the canal at Harrison two miles, to the railroad at South Paris twelve miles. The land is valuable for settling purposes after being cleared of timber.
Also 435 Shares of Stock in the Lewiston Steam Mill Company, the whole capital stock being represented by 837 shares. The property of the company consists of a Steam Saw Mill, capable of manufacturing five million feet of long lumber, with a proportionate amount of clapboards, shingles and laths. About fifteen acres land in the city of Lewiston, well located for building purposes, and thirty thousand acres of timber land, well located on the Androscoggin river and its branches, from which but a small quantity of the timber has been cut.

Dr. Pattee's Spring Bitters.
The only Blood Purifier and Liver Invigorator now in use.
Never fails to cure Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Costiveness, Headache, Dizziness, Biliousness, Eruptions on the Skin, Humors of the Blood, and all complaints caused by Impure Blood, Obstructed Circulation or a Deranged and Diseased Condition of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels.
If you are Sick, try these Bitters. The very first dose will do you good!
(Read the following, which Mrs. B. Kil[illegible] of Great Falls, wrote in July 10, 1869):
"I desire to give my testimony as to what your Bitters have done for me. For ten years I was not able to do my own work, owing to a disease of the liver. My liver was much swollen, and twice the size it should be. I tried the best physicians but could get no relief, some pronouncing me incurable. A friend recommended your Bitters, and I immediately procured a bottle, which helped me right away. I have taken four bottles, and my liver is reduced to the natural size, and my health is completely restored. I think it is the best medicine now in use for liver complaints. I have recommended it to my friends, and they are using it and feeling greatly improved by it."
Every bottle warranted to give satisfaction, or money refunded.

EUROPEAN LETTERS
BY DR. B. [illegible]
One of the May Anniversaries in London.
To the Editor of the Whig & Courier:

You may wonder that in my communications respecting the popular orators of England, I have said so little in regard to the most popular of all oratory, the oratory of the Pulpit. There is a time, you know, for all things; and the time to report on the Pulpit eloquence of England has not yet come. I have first to make my way to it through, or over, the English platform. Having spoken, therefore, of some of the leading platform speakers of the two political parties here, I wish now to call your attention to another class of platform speakers. I refer to those known here as anniversary speakers.

The month of May, in England, is in the United States, is the month of the great anniversary meetings. There are now in full swing among us. They are held about three a day during May; and they sometimes run over, as they do this year, to the middle or even the very last of June. As there is quite a difference between a May anniversary here in London and the same sort of meeting in Boston or New York, I will first of all give you an idea of the English plan, and with this you can institute such comparisons as you may have time or interest to make. Having received letters and cards of invitation to several of them, I will select one—that of the Sunday School Union—as a sample of all the rest.

In the morning, from seven to eight, the leading members of the Union, well known or distinguished friends of the society, please especially to attend a breakfast together in some public [illegible]. The one, I here describe was taken in the [illegible] of the building belonging to the Union in the Old Bailey, opposite to the platform of Newgate prison, as ominous a street as can be found in any city in the world. All the officers, and all the guests, are very prompt in their attendance. The first assembling is in the great hall ante-rooms. At the sound of a little bell the company files off into the breakfast room. The president and [illegible] the head of the table, the [illegible] sits down at the lower end; the remainder of the [illegible] [illegible] dong, [illegible] on both sides, according to some rule or [illegible] known to me; the invited [illegible] next shown their seats; and the place [illegible] of members take such chairs [illegible] to be left. A good deal of form is observed, causing a feeling of uneasiness to Americans, who wishes to observe the feed just a little still.

Before the knives are touched, a short [illegible] of the American "blessing," [illegible] by the oldest, or ablest, or other chief man present, whom the president in particular [illegible]. Then comes the repast, which at [illegible] of a cup of tea to be had out [illegible] buttered and either [illegible] coffee, as the individual may happen to [illegible]. You may be offered a little beef's tongue or a piece of cold mutton, but, except this, the meats are entirely cold. There is a Spartan plainness in everything; [illegible] get in over-dose of food at these [illegible] ever much you may [illegible] to fortify your human nature for long [illegible]. But there is one luxury [illegible] provided for you. It is the good support [illegible] benevolent, religious [illegible] great men. These [illegible] around you. They are men of [illegible] the whole world [illegible]. You have [illegible] more than ideas, not the color of [illegible] eye and hear them their ideas [illegible] them as friend to friend, mark all the [illegible] of mind and manner, and [illegible] your own future use many an impression [illegible] many a companion, many a souvenir [illegible] will not willingly forget.

From thirty to forty minutes are thus [illegible] eating, drinking, and conversation. [illegible] ever. The [illegible] of the public meetings is opening, [illegible] Perhaps a friendly criticism [illegible] in a friendly spirit, may [illegible] plate to [illegible] "all is well that ends well." So [illegible] on this [illegible] the frugal [illegible] religious [illegible] and dispersed [illegible] standing [illegible] separate knots, till the [illegible] for the first public service to be [illegible].

We are now called into a small chapel, [illegible] "breakfast-room," where all at once [illegible]. The President takes the chair; the several secretaries range themselves at their writing-tables on either hand; several of the most distinguished persons present are invited to take seats with the officers on the platform; and the work of the morning session opens. It is a sort of conference, where the speaking is entirely voluntary, each speaker being limited by rule to ten minutes. In the application of the rule, the chairman is promptly inflexible. He will not suffer a word beyond the finishing of a half spoken syllable, after the rap of his little mallet on the table. Strict, it is, [illegible] this particular, that he had to smile several times at the ludicrous attitude in which he would leave a speaker. One was saying that he always admired a Sunday-School Superintendent who understood his business. He had gone as far as the first half of the last word. Down came the mallet. Not another breath could he draw on that subject. So he was made to say, that he "always admired a superintendent who understood his biz." That would do very well; but as the speaker was a very grave and "fluent" old gentleman, who would not horrified voluntarily to say biz for business, there was a good deal of tittering over the whole assembly. Another gentleman, however, was placed in a still more awkward predicament. He seemed to be conscious that his ten minutes were about expired. But he wished to check what he had been saying by a very emphatic sentence. He addressed the chairman in a very vigorous manner, "I repeat it, sir," said he, with his right hand raised above his head, "you have not the smallest particle of common sense—" Here the mallet fell. He was going, probably, to add, "to sustain such a proposition," or something to that effect. But the mallet was inexorable. Every body laughed at the speaker's forced assault on the intelligence of the noble chairman. He laughed too, though sympathizing with the speaker, whose still up-raised arm gave great emphasis to the absurdity of his position. But the rule was law; and the next speaker seized the opportunity and took the floor. But I laughed the heartiest, as all did, over the position of another gentleman, who was by far the most eloquent talker present. He spoke with great zeal, and force, as well as beauty. He described the condition of the world under the influence of a general diffusion of the gospel. He said that the prospect was enough to intoxicate one with pleasurable emotions. "When that day comes," he exclaimed with prodigious force, "I shall be drunk"—The hammer fell; down sat the speaker; and up rose a universal merriment over the idea of the gifted man's being "drunk," not with joy as he evidently intended, to add, but with something dreadfully more common, here in London. So iron a rule, and so thoughtfully enforced, could not fail to produce such examples of absurdity. It occurred to me, that if the whole affair had been a play, the object or point of which had been to make fun by throwing grave men into the most ridiculous positions, no better expedient could have been adopted than the rigid application of this ten minute rule. Such a rule leniently enforced, giving a man time to complete a sentence, would be very good; but lenience in the execution of a law is not at all English; and I have witnessed in many proceedings of the courts, in matters of the most trivial importance, the same English tendency to the most unbending stiffness in the enforcement of the statutes.

It must not be inferred, however, that this meeting of the friends of the Sunday school cause in England was all a farce. Far from it. It was a very august assembly of great and good men; their hearts were in their glorious work; and their speeches were generally very sensible, full of fact and argument, abounding with the wisdom coming from experience, and delivered with no little zeal and eloquence. Most of the persons present were gentlemen directly engaged in the work in the various Sunday-schools of England. Among [illegible] were not a few of the higher orders of [illegible]. Several members of parliament had [illegible] upon the platform. Two or three of [illegible] made speeches, in which they showed [illegible] deeply interested in the work of [illegible] Sunday-school institutions. One of the many [illegible] made by a certain "Sir"—a gentleman knighted for his attainments—was exceedingly to the point; and it was delivered [illegible] great readiness of speech, and with a proper degree of fervor. Another "Sir" [illegible] called upon, he was a very young man, [illegible] for the good qualities of his ancestors [illegible] in other words, he was descended [illegible] with his father's prosperity; by the [illegible] he had made himself a member [illegible] present parliament, but he was a weak youth; and his remarks, though [illegible] were rambling, pointless without the smallest value, showing [illegible] that in mind as well as body, with all [illegible] in society, he was nothing but a [illegible].

The best speech made on this occasion was [illegible] by one of the general secretaries of the [illegible]—Mr. W. H. Groser—a member of a Congregational Church in London whose talents are devoted exclusively to this business. He is a fine and able writer, and his books are very popular in all the Sunday Schools of [illegible] England. His leading work is on the business of Sunday School instruction, and I consider it the ablest treatise I have ever read on the subject. He entitles it "OUR WORK," [illegible] is divided into four parts, which are [illegible] more nor less than four splendid essays. The first is, "OUR MATERIAL; or, What is a Child?" a beautiful exposition of human nature, bodily and mentally, in the budding period of childhood. The second [illegible] "THE INSTRUMENTS; or, What to Teach," and this shows how exactly revelation is fitted to all the elements of our being, [illegible] treated in the leading essay. The third, [illegible] to TEACH; or, the Right Use of the Instruments," which is a clear and captivating [illegible] of the science of juvenile education. The fourth is called "AT WORK; or, School Teaching," wherein you see all the principles hitherto developed in actual successful operation. The book is written in a charming style, and is in every way perfect as a text-book for Sunday School [illegible]. I could not forbear giving your [illegible] readers some general notion of its [illegible] and contents. But the able Secretary [illegible] no more able with the pen than on the [illegible]. He speaks with ease, fluency, [illegible] and beauty. His address was replete [illegible] good thoughts forcibly and eloquently [illegible] and with his, after a little desultory conversation, and the reading of a few [illegible], we came to the close of this morning [illegible] conference.

[illegible] the nooning, after the adjournment of [illegible] first meeting, rather an elaborate dinner [illegible] served in the great breakfast-room, for [illegible] officers, members and invited guests of the [illegible], all of whom had been furnished with [illegible] tickets. Being myself, by choice, an [illegible] of plain dishes, I had only to cast my [illegible] over the tables to satisfy me that, in my [illegible] discretion would be the better part of [illegible]. In a word, I bolted, not the dinner, [illegible] the place, and hastened homeward to get [illegible] eating in a style adapted to my constitution. The great meal of the day, therefore, I am unable to report; but I have seen enough of English conviviality to assume me in saying that, even among these good and truly religious and philanthropic men, there would be plenty of cheer, and enough of that peculiar element, to make, the paraphrase of the great poet good: for the very best of Englishmen know how to drink. In neither eating or drinking, however, would there be the smallest tendency to excess; but it is not yet possible for a company of English gentlemen to conceive the idea of a good time without something in the way of wine, or of a stronger beverage, to wash it down.

"The feast of reason and the flowing bowl."

Dinner being thus dispatched, the morning session was again resumed. The second meeting was in the same little chapel; but there is a marked difference in the attendance. The President is gone; the senior secretary is gone; several of the leading speakers are also absent. The meeting seems to be left to the junior members, and to those older gentlemen whose position in society, or whose modesty, had not brought them into prominence; but the discussions are well maintained. The debating is really able. As a whole, the speakers are to me more interesting; they are possessed of greater spirit than those of the morning session. The chair being occupied by a vice-president, the ten-minute rule was not very rigidly enforced; there were, therefore, no ludicrous exhibitions of abrupt decapitation, and, at precisely half-past four in the afternoon, the convention again adjourned to the dining-room to conclude the public repasts of the day by a cup of tea. Here again, as in the morning, there is little nothing on the tables but tea and bread and butter. Half an hour is given to this concluding meal; and then the tables being regularly dismissed, there is a final adjournment made pro forma to the great audience room at Exeter Hall, the largest single room in London.

Hastening to the great hall with a platform ticket in my possession I reached there in time to precede the adjourned convention, for I wished to secure an eligible seat, and with this purpose in view, it would not do to enter with the crowd. Being familiar with the place, I knew exactly where to go, and I thereby secured the seat I wanted. The public services were to begin at six, and it was at a quarter after five. But I was by no means alone; the body of the great hall was already crowded, and, for three-quarters of an hour there was a constant jamming of population at the several doors, which served to wedge the audience tighter and tighter till the doors were shut and barred. Then, just about one minute to six o'clock in marched the convention, the president and the officers in the lead, who filed off to the right and left upon the spacious platform, which will hold about as many people as an ordinary church. As the clock struck the hour of six, the president arose and presented the name of a distinguished Englishman, whom he recommended to them as the person to take the chair. The motion was of course accepted; and the next thing was a short but pointed introductory address, or oration, from the chair. Mr. William Grosser, father of the [illegible] secretary, read the annual report, a very able and judicious document; then the meeting was in full operation.

The chairman rose and said, that the resolution, which he held in his hand, he read, would be moved by a very distinguished speaker (naming him) sitting at his left; and the gentleman referred to, whose name I could not catch, at once came forward and made his speech. He was a young man about thirty years of age, with a full round head, pleasant countenance, and a very winning voice. He spoke with great accuracy and even elegance. As to matter, the speech was a series of pictures artistically drawn and shaded; the presentation of them was very beautifully done; the whole affair was a thing of beauty, but not without argument and strength. In fact, every successive picture was an argument; the delivery was quite natural and eloquent; and yet the young gentleman is a speaker rather than an orator. He lacks the fire, the passion, the genius that spurns at obstacles, laughs at opposition, and like the whirlwind carries all before it.

This first speaker was followed by a gentleman whom I would not name if I could. I can say nothing more in his favor than he did not damage the impression made by his predecessor. He was simply a cypher, perhaps a cypher on the telling side of the numeral; for these nothings are sometimes powerful by position. It may have been so with this gentleman. He may have been a person of great value in the Sunday School enterprise; but as a speaker, he was simply without prominence or character.

Nearly the same thing is to be repeated of all the succeeding speakers, excepting the distinguished clerical representative from Birmingham, a Congregational minister, whose name I have forgotten, but whose speech was the ablest, in every way, delivered on this occasion. I am sorry to be so forgetful of names. I might have taken home with me a programme. But that I forgot also. I can only say, that this Birmingham minister, while not an orator by any means, is a man of powerful intellect, and a very impressive speaker. He reminded me throughout of the Rev. Dr. Swan L. Pomeroy, former pastor of the first parish church of Bangor, only Dr. Pomeroy was quite his superior in eloquence. Dr. Pomeroy's best platform efforts were superior, indeed, to anything of the kind I have yet heard in England. So much the greater pity that he should have died, as I believe he did, not without his indiscretions, but innocent of intended wrong, a black martyr.

The final speaker was a Rev. Mr. Simpson, whose name I remember, because of its being that of my old fellow-laborer and dear friend, Bishop Simpson of American Methodism, whom the world knows as one of its leading orators. This British Simpson is also a Methodist; he is in addition an eloquent, fluent, forcible speaker; his ideas are numerous, striking, and effective; but like his great name-sake, his delivery is neither correct nor elegant. There is at first something a little awkward about both, but the lofty genius of the American soon causes you to forget all trivial faults; and the fervor of the British clergymen has something of the same effect upon his hearers. His speech, too, so far as the matter is concerned, was the best of the evening as to its adaptness to the exact object of the great meeting. He has a vigorous arm; in it he carries a hammer of great strength and weight; every time he speaks he hits the nail directly on the head; and one last blow or two not only drives it fully home, but buries it almost out of sight.

When his last blow was struck, and he went to his seat amidst the loudest applause of the whole evening, my conclusion was that the topics and speakers had been well arranged, considering the material which the managers had had presented to them. The first of the speakers was the ablest for making a good introduction, for opening the way, and for exciting a general interest in what was sure to follow. Then came a section of necessary, but cold and unentertaining details, given out by several very ordinary men; and it took the place of what is known as the explication in an artistic speech. The argument, the great ideas, the overpowering logic, was furnished by the Congregational clergyman from Birmingham; and then came the appreciative, the practical, the hard-thinking and vigorous Wesleyan, with a tolerably well-trained intellect of about forty horse-power, and with a heart as hot and hissing as a steam-engine, to drive every idea home. But there was one part of the whole performance wanting. There was no one there gifted to make the peroration—to wipe up the last particle of doubt or opposition—to lift the great audience above all possibility of further resistance or even criticism—to suspend for the moment the movements of the world on the success of their exalted undertaking,—to annihilate time and bring the vast audience into the presence of the eternal consequences of that day's efforts—to open heaven itself and cause every rapt auditor to see the celestial inhabitants lay aside their high employments to witness what every listener in that vast assembly might resolve to do, on that occasion, to secure results in which all worlds were interested—in a word, to take all the facts, ideas, suggestions, truths and principles hitherto presented as mere thoughts and words, and connect them by a magic power into immediate, resistless, god-like action!

The case of the Connecticut Mutual Benefit Company, the agent being charged with doing business contrary to Massachusetts laws was in Court at Worcester on Thursday, the question being whether the said company is an insurance company in the meaning of the said laws. A pro forma verdict of guilty was rendered and the case goes to a higher court on exceptions.

THE INFALLIBILITY DOGMA. The Ecumenical Council decided on Thursday that the dogma of infallibility shall be proclaimed on June 29th in honor of the feast of St. Peter. Extensive preparations are being made to celebrate the occasion, and the display of pomp and pageantry will surpass any demonstration ever witnessed in Europe. The religious services will be of a most solemn and impressive character, and thousands of visitors from every city in Europe will be present to witness the display or take part in the ceremonies. The schema of the dogma of infallibility has been distributed in printed form. It contains five canons, as follows:

1. If any one should say that the Episcopal chair of the Roman Church is not the true and real infallible chair of the Blessed Peter, or that it has not been divinely chosen by God as the most solid, indefectible, and incorruptible rock of the whole Christian Church, let him be anathema.

2. If any should say that there exists in the world another infallible chair of the truth of the gospel of our Lord distinct and separate from the chair of Blessed Peter, let him be anathema.

3. If any one should deny that the divine magisterium of the chair of blessed Peter is necessary to the true way of eternal salvation for all men, whether unfaithful or faithful, whether laymen, or bishops, let him be anathema.

4. If any one should say that each Roman Pontiff, legitimately elected, is not by divine right the successor of blessed Peter, even in the gift of the infallibility of magisterium, and should deny to any one of them the prerogative of infallibility for teaching the church the word of God pure from all corruption and error, let him be anathema.

5. If any one should say that general councils are established by God in the church as a power of feeding the divine flock in the word of faith superior to the Roman Pontiff, or equal to him, or necessary by divine institution in order that the magisterium of the Roman Bishop should be preserved infallible, let him be anathema.

SCANDINAVIAN IMMIGRATION.

The following letter from W. W. Thomas, Jr., to Hon. P. P. Burleigh, State Land Agent, shows what progress had been made at the date of writing:

GOTHENBURG, Sweden, May 17.

HON. PARKER P. BURLEIGH:

Dear Sir:—I arrived in Sweden yesterday morning. Our enterprise has been well announced by my agents. Seven families have applied to one—two to the other—and three more to one this morning. I have secured the influence of the principal men and newspapers in this portion of Sweden, and I can promise you the scheme will be a success. A very favorable editorial will appear in this evening's issue of the leading paper of Gothenburg. I will forward you a marked copy. I have announced that I will take no family unless they bring good certificates as to character, industry, &c., &c. They must be young men, farmers from a timber country. I have as yet promised to take none of the applicants. I am putting the thing in the light of a great favor to them. I am sure to have my pick, and shall pick good ones. I sail with the colony from Gothenburg June 24, and shall arrive in Halifax about July 12 or 14, and at Woodstock as soon after as possible. If the river is not navigable to Woodstock I shall come by rail to Houlton. I will look out for the European end. I hope the American terminus is being located and built. I have promised the immigrants that Maine will furnish transportation from the State line, give acres felled and burnt, and a house of two rooms. I hope these things will be in readiness by July 15.

Write me here up to June 6, and to Liverpool, care of Henry Thomas, American Emigrant Agent, from June 6 to 20.

Please write me on receipt of this and let me know what has been done. I will write you at least once a week and keep you posted. I am now in search of a good pastor. I have opened an office in Gothenborg and shall travel somewhat in the north of Sweden. Could you not have one-half of one-quarter of an acre planted with turnips on each farm?

Yours very truly,

W. W. THOMAS.

BOSTON HARTFORD & ERIE R. R. The Massachusetts House on Thursday afternoon, by sixteen majority, passed with slight modifications, the new bill offered by Mr. Goodrich, extending State aid to the Boston, Hartford & Erie Railroad. The important feature of the new bill is that it proposes that the State shall give up the Berdell bonds it now holds as collateral, to be used with an equal amount contributed by the other bondholders, for the completion of the road to Fishkill; the State and the others receiving instead an equal amount of the bonds of the second mortgage. The bill also provides for the reorganization of the Company, to meet the approval of the Governor and Council, for satisfactory contracts to finish the road within the amounts already named, for the settlement of all claims and attachments upon the property, with the interest accruing until July, 1872, by means of the 2d mortgage bonds, and for the necessary ratification and acceptance of the act.

Friday, when the Committees were announced and [illegible] then adjourned until Monday, but no business will be transacted until Tuesday. The United States laws provide that the vote for Senator shall be on the second Tuesday of the session and continued each day until an election. A caucus for the nomination will be held on the 13th, and the balloting commence the next day.

A friend of Riel telegraphs from St. Cloud to Toronto, that Riel is disgusted with the Manitoba bill, because it does not provide for a general amnesty, and intends resisting the Red River expedition. He has 400 men at Fort Garry and 800 on the Prairies. A battle is expected near the Lake of the Woods. A large band of half breeds have been sent out as scouts for the purpose of watching the expedition. The [illegible] and half breeds are on bad terms, and the despatch says Riel is robbing the Winnipeg mail, to provide himself with funds previous to his departure to the United States.

Several persons arrested in Paris during the recent political excitement, for complicity in the plot against the nation and the life of the Emperor, had preliminary examinations Thursday, in the Chamber of Accusation of the High Court. The Court also investigated the papers found on the persons of some of the prisoners. Many of them were adjudged to have no connection with the conspiracy. Some of the prisoners were held for trial, and several were unconditionally released.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

For the first time in the history of Delaware a State Republican Convention has been called to meet at Dover, June 9th.

The two political elements, woman suffrage and temperance, have united in West Virginia. Those who represent these ideas propose to hold a State convention at Grafton on June 23d.

At Fort Pleasant, West Virginia a convention will be held to take action in favor of the repeal of proscriptive laws against those who took part in the rebellion. The call is signed by Republicans.

It is said that Wolcott Hamlin, now Engrossing Clerk of the Senate, is to be Supervisor of Internal Revenue for Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, and W. A. Simonds of Boston, is to be Supervisor for Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

On Thursday night the Republican General Committee of New York City, after an excited and protracted discussion, passed resolutions expressing their entire confidence in Collector Grinnell, and urging the administration to retain him in his position.

It is believed that if the bill to reduce Internal Taxes now pending in Congress, should become a law, the Commissioner will be able to reduce the force a local officers fully one-third. The idea is to consolidate the collection districts.

"Princess" Editha, a daughter of Lola Montez and King Leopold of Belgium, lectured Thursday evening in Steinway Hall, New York, on the social condition of women, what she was, is, and should be. She was introduced by Mrs. Cady Stanton. Miss Editha proceeded to condemn the members of the Sorosis as party talkers, instead of workers, and to advocate a reform in dress as the first step toward reform in politics and morals. She announced that she would appear on Broadway on Friday, in new "Parliamentary costume."

There is no truth in statement concerning the health of Mr. Seward. He has enjoyed good health for several months past.

FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS---SECOND SESSION

SENATE.

Mr. Sumner offered a resolution calling upon the President if in his opinion, it was not incompatible with the public interests for any information in the department of State concerning the reported persecution and massacre of Israelites in Roumania. He said the reports were so absolutely horrible that it was but natural to suppose them grossly exaggerated. It was incumbent upon us in the interests of humanity, to possess all information concerning it that might be attained.

Mr. Sprague attributed the cause of the massacre to the fact that the Jews had obtained possession of all business, lands and trade of the country; that while one class of people were in poverty, without means of business, there was another, an eager money-getting, monopolizing population.

Mr. Stewart remarked that if it was the intention of Senator Sprague to establish a rule that when a man got rich he ought to be killed, might not inconvenience some Senators but it would bear very hard upon others, and among them the Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr Sumner's resolution was then agreed to, and after an ineffectual attempt by Mr. Trumbull to get up the representative apportionment bill, the Indian appropriation bill was proceeded with, and the amendments appropriating $598,000 for carrying out the treaty stipulations with the Arapaho, Navajo, Wyandotte and Winnebago Indians, and $50,000 to collect, locate and subsist the roving Indians on the borders of Texas and Mexico was agreed to.

Without disposing of the the bill, the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.

Bills were passed amending the act of May 4th, so that writs of error shall be allowed from the decisions of the Probate Court to the Supreme Courts of Territories, and directing the remains of E. M. Sanlaud, late U. S. Consul at Vera Cruz, to be removed to New York.

The Senate amendments to the bill making appropriations for the deficiencies in the appropriation for mileage and compensation of members of Congress, was concurred in.

Mr. Butler, of Mass., from the Reconstruction Committee, rose to report the Georgia bill.

The Speaker decided that the bill had no higher privilege than the bill now occupying the attention of the House.

Mr. Butler proposed that the tax bill be set aside. (Rejected.)

The Speaker announced that, according to the order of yesterday, the vote would first be taken on the various amendments to the sections relating to the income tax.

Amendments making the exemption $2,000; limiting the allowance for house rent to $500, and prohibiting the publication of income returns, were agreed to.

Amendments were offered by Mr. Dawes, of Mass., to treat the number of persons to a family in a social or religious community, holding property in common, at five instead of ten; Mr. Catlins, to add to exemption losses by floods; Mr. Elas, exempting the wages of minor children; and Mr. Burchards, providing that assessors shall require all returns to be verified under oath and may increase the amount of return upon notice to the party that they have reason to believe that the income is understated, and severally agreed to and Mr. McCarthy, to strike out all the sections relating to the income tax, was rejected—33 to 123.

All the other pending amendments having been rejected, the question recurred on Mr. Beck's amendment to include United States bonds among those of corporations from which the taxes to be deducted.

Mr. Schenck, of Ohio, argued at length against the proposition, claiming that it would really subject the interest on bonds to a double tax, as the income from them was required to be included in income returns, and that the scheme was practical repudiation.

Mr. Butler of Mass., supported Mr. Beck's amendment, and proposed also that the interest on town, county, and State bonds be taxed in the same manner. They were not taxed now. It was only the consciences of the men holding these bonds that were taxed, and he was sorry to say that consciences had not been a very profitable source of profit. Every honest man now paid a tax on his income from these bonds, and the object was to make the rogues pay also. The Com on Ways and Means had provided by the bill to tax savings banks, thus taxing the pittance of sewing girls, widows and orphans, but excused from taxation 21,000,000,000 of U. S. bonds. Were the members to go to the people with that proposition? Not he for one. Might his right hand forget his cunning if he he did. Had the United States pledged their faith that the bonds should not be taxed? They had not. No man, not even the broker who sold any of these bonds had done so. If the United States had agreed not to tax these bonds he would sit down.

Mr. Benton—Did we not agree to pay the amount specified on the bond and interest.

Mr Butler—Yes, sir, and we are going to do it, and then we are going to collect the tax on it, so that the rascals who hold these bonds and do not pay tax on the interest shall not cheat us.

The discussion was continued, Mr. Eldridge of Wis., coming to the aid of Messrs. Butler and Beck, and the amendment was finally rejected, 78 to 10.

Mr. Brooks of N. Y. offered an amendment to one of the sections of the provision to reduce the tariff on sugar and salt 33 per cent. on coffee and tea 20 per cent, and on pig and scrap iron 22½ per cent.

Mr. Eldridge of Wis., made a point of order that the tariff provision was not in order to the internal revenue bill.

It was understood that this movement was an attempt to scout the tariff bill which Mr. Schenck proposes to attach to the pending measure.

After the discussion the speaker decided that the amendment was in order, saying that the practice conformed to that of the British Parliament and of the early legislation of Congress; but not wishing to force his own judgment on the House, submitted the question to a vote.

The House decided, 117 to 35, that the amendment was germain to the bill, but the speaker ruled that it could not be offered to the pending section. When the last section of the bill was reached Mr. Schenck moved the previous question, but without disposing of the motion the House adjourned.

children at the common table. The same food is given to all, and the bill of fare is by no means a poor one. Brigham, from time to time, designates some of his wives to take charge of the cooking, and they remain on duty until relieved; during the day the women walk out, sew, sing, play the piano in the parlor or walk with the children. Most of them spin, make cloth and color it. They are very proud of their cloth and embroidery. In the evening all hands go to the theatre, where every one of Brigham's wives has a reserved seat. It is said that Young liberally supplies his wives with money, and on fine days they drive out and go shopping. He employs a music teacher, French teacher and dancing master, for the use of his household. Brigham's women are well dressed, but still they have to work hard and he keeps up a wholesome discipline over them.

LIME FOR THE SOIL.—The manner of applying lime as a manure to the soil has a considerable influence over its effect upon crops. It is injudicious to mix quicklime with animal manures or with vegetable manures in a decomposing condition, its tendency being to form insoluble compounds with almost all animal and vegetable substances that are of use, and to destroy or counteract their fermentive properties. Hence the impropriety of applying it in conjunction with barnyard manure. The substances, which are suitable for being formed into a compost with lime, are numerous and in most cases may be readily procured by the farmer.

In general, all materials containing much inert vegetable matter are well adapted to this purpose. The superfluous soil accumulated on the headlands of fields, old banks of earth, the scouring of ditches, swamp muck, decaying suds, etc, are suitable for the compost. It has been ascertained by experience that a mixture of lime with some of these materials proves highly efficacious as a top dressing, although the lime or other substances may produce but little benefit when applied separately to the land. Thus a mixture of lime and sand, or of lime and muck, is almost invariably found to produce the most beneficial effects on stiff, tenacious clay, even after the former had ceased to operate advantageously, as a stimulant of the soil.—Western Rural.

THE STRAWBERRY.—Of all the fruits which gratify the taste and promote the health of the people, no one excels the strawberry. It is rare to find any one that is not fond of it, and it may be regarded as the most healthful of all. No one can go amiss in cultivating it for the use of his family. A few rods on every farm and near every cottage will be sure to promote the comfort of the community.

It has become fairly settled as the only sound method of cultivating the strawberry that the plants should be kept from runners. The effect of this practice is wonderful. The whole growth of the plant is concentrated by this means in the original stock, and it enlarges, until as many as a quart of berries have been plucked from a single plant. It will be understood that this method is followed only with such plants as are not raised with a view of propagation, but are permanent varieties set out for family use. In order to sell, the runners must be encouraged. After all, the endless list of varieties which have been extolled as the best, the Wilson retains its position as the best market berry. Much will be found to depend on the nature of the soil and the mode of cultivation. Before the plants are in bloom in early spring, the application of liquid manure will be found of great value.

We are glad to see the evidence that the interest in this delicious fruit is increasing, and that many farmers are turning their attention to it so far as to raise a little patch for their own use, and we hope our markets will be more abundantly supplied hereafter than they have ever been. We cannot have too many of them, and they would pay at half the price they usually bring.—Mass. Ploughman.

AN UNPLEASANT LIFE.—Events are constantly happening in England to prove how much darker is the truth, in the matter of trades-union outrages, than any picture of it which even Mr. Charles Reade can draw. Sheffield has recently been the scene of many of these incidents in the past, but now attention is called to Manchester, by the case of a Mr. Johnson, an extensive builder. Having chosen to disregard the ukase of the unions against the shaping of building stone at the quarries, or the use of machine made bricks, Mr. Johnson has found his life in danger for twelvemonths. His property has been injured; his servants have left him; his friends dare not come to his house; his coachman dare not drive him home. Mr. Johnson's sleeping place is a profound secret. On the night when he ventured to attempt to remain in his own house in a suburban quarter, a violent explosion of gunpowder took place in his drawing-room, and only accident prevented the whole house from being blown to atoms. This is in the second city of England to-day; and the police seem quite unable to afford any protection, though the county officers have informed Mr. Johnson that he can have as many guards as he chooses by paying eight pence an hour for each man. This case is made especially aggravating by the fact that the gentleman so persecuted has been constant in his endeavors to better the condition of the workingman, and in attempts to elevate him socially, politically and morally.

The local of one of the Leavenworth papers relates that on a pretty dark night recently, a man in Kansas City fell over one of the many high banks with which that city abounds, and lay for some time in a senseless condition. On recovering consciousness, he was startled by groans in his immediate vicinity, and on feeling about he found that two boys had met with a similar accident. By this time, a citizen passing in the vicinity and hearing the noise came to see what was the matter, and he too fell over the bank. His cries attracted others, who coming to learn the cause of the commotion, successively fell over the bank, until the "hole" was about half full of people who had come after each other. No account of the sequel is given.

TO CLEAN CARPETS. A few drops of carbonate of ammonia in a small quantity of warm rain-water, will prove a safe and easy antacid, and will change, if carefully applied, discolored spots upon carpets, and all spots, whether produced by acids or alkalies. If you have a carpet injured by whitewash, this will restore it.

TO CLEAN MATTING. Put a double handful of salts into a bucket of cold water; wash the matting, a small piece at a time, rub it well with a coarse cloth; avoid treading on the matting until it is dry.

LIQUID GLUE. Melt a little isinglass in spirits of wine, adding one-fifth water, using a gentle heat; when perfectly melted and mixed, it will form a transparent glue, which will unite glass so fast that the fracture will hardly be seen.

To exterminate roaches and ants, wash the place carefully; when dry sprinkle powdered borax freely. In a few days they will disappear.

PAYING THE FREIGHT.—The miners in the new territories are victimized without mercy by the Jew traders that they are compelled to buy supplies of. An English miner who went to buy a darning needle, selected one, stuck it in the lappel of his coat and asked the price.

"Four bits (half a dollar) my teah."

"Four bits! four devils," said the miner; "why, where I come from you can buy a dozen for one bit."

"Vere you come from?" said the trader.

"Birmingham, England."

"Yaas, dat ish so, but this is in America, you know."

"Suppose it is—what difference does that make?" said the sooty worker of ores.

"Ah! you forget der freight, my teah," said the peddler, with a deprecatory shrug.—Com. Bulletin.

The trees are old enough, they are healthy, and they grow very fast, but they yield little or no fruit.
